Daily Life in Greece at the Museum of Fine Arts

Thursday, February 15, 2018

This winter the Boston Museum of Fine Arts is debuting a fascinating new permanent exhibit hall entitled "Daily Life in Ancient Greece". Offering rare glimpses of marriage and death, infancy and old age—and many of the intimate details in between—this new gallery is designed to encourage visitors to make immediate connections with an ancient culture. More than 200 recently conserved objects present an engaging visual introduction to the complexities of daily life in ancient Greece. Other topics highlighted in the gallery include the origins of the Olympic Games, everyday tasks like cooking, family life, funerary traditions and commerce, with tools from centuries-old professions—such as farming, medicine, fishing, shoemaking and butchery—reinforcing connections between ancient traditions and modern life. Enjoy 4 ½ hours to explore the new exhibit hall, the general exhibit halls and to enjoy lunch on your own at the museum.
